DAILY DEVOTIONAL FROM PASTOR SELL

Monday, August 9

Recently I watched a large bird gliding over the fields between Salunga and Mount Joy. The black bird was a dark spot floating against a pale blue sky. I watch a lot of little birds flitting around the garden. They take a leap and flap their wings mightily to stay aloft. This big black bird rarely moved its wings as it caught one air eddy after another to glide and stay high in the air. It was graceful and beautiful to watch.

The Christian life is a bit like that. Those who have built a strong relationship with Christ seem to face the difficulties of life by flying high and are only buffered by the wind from time to time. When we are confident of our relationship with Christ, we can look at the world from a different perspective. We can see the current chaos in our lives is only temporary and the situation will get better. Christ is with us and together we can soar.
