DAILY DEVOTIONAL FROM PASTOR SELL

Monday, October 11

I repotted my basil last night and watered it this morning. When I first dripped the water on the earth, a little soaked into the ground but most ran off. I slowly dripped more and more into the pot and the I put in the more it soaked up. The basil should be good for a few days before it needs watering again. I hope I can keep the plant alive during the winter because there is nothing like fresh basil.

Our Christian faith is like that repotted basil. At first much of the Good News can roll away, but as we soak it in, we want more and more of Jesus teaching. We want to be among the people of God and worship the creator. We want to know how Jesus' life, death, and resurrection impact our lives. We want to soak up the Word of God so we can grow and thrive.
